1. In your book, Spiritual Warrior, you talk about accepting the enemy within. Do we also have to accept our enemies in the world?
2. How can we love our enemies when we are looking to kill them for the pain and suffering they have caused?
3. In Spiritual Warrior you talk about the fear of the unknown and the unknowable. Can you speak of how that applies to our current fears of more terrorist attacks?
4. You say that a Spiritual Warrior accepts all things, does that mean that we have to just let the terrorist keep terrorizing us?
5. The title of your book, Spiritual Warrior, seems like it contradicts what you teach about peace. Can you explain why you chose that title and what it means?
6. You have led groups of over 100 people to many countries in the Middle East, and have driven through areas where there were terrorist camps. How did you handle people's fears of terrorism in the groups you led?
7. When you were traveling in the Middle East, did you find that the majority of people you met hated or disliked you because you are American?
8. How can we create greater possibilities of a peaceful world in this time of war?
